"I'm glad I'm not his type," writer E. Jean Carroll said after the president denied sexually assaulting her.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

President Donald Trump denied a recent claim that he raped writer E. Jean Carroll 23 years ago, insisting that she's not his "type."

Carroll is the 22nd woman to publicly accuse the president of sexual assault. Her allegations came to light Friday in New York Magazine, in an excerpt from a forthcoming book. Since then, there has been criticism over the lack of public conversation around the rape claim, with some victims' advocates pointing to the normalization of sexual misconduct.

Carroll, 75, said in the mid-1990s that Trump threw her up against a wall at a dressing room at Bergdorf Goodman in Manhattan so violently that "I hit my head really hard: boom." Carroll said she tried to fight back, but was overpowered.

"I'll say it with great respect," Trump said in an interview with The Hill, that Carroll was "totally lying," and emphatically insisted he didn't know anything about her. "Number 1, she's not my type. Number 2, it never happened. It never happened, OK?"

Trump used a similar defense when smacking down another sexual misconduct claim in 2016. After Jessica Leeds said Trump groped her on a plane in the 1980s, Trump told crowds at a campaign rally that Leeds "would not be my first choice."

He also denied the claims on Saturday, telling media, "People have to be careful, because "Number 1, she's not my type. Number 2, it never happened. It never happened, OK?"

President Donald Trump

they're playing with very dangerous territory."

In response to Trump's comments, Carroll told Anderson Cooper in an interview Monday night: "I love that. I am so glad I'm not his type. I'm so glad." Carroll also said on CNN that the president "just went at it" during the alleged attack, pulling down her tights. "It was a fight," she said. Carroll said she told two friends, but didn't report the incident for fear of retribution.

When discussing Trump's denial of myriad sexual assault allegations, Carroll said, "He denies, he turns it around, he threatens and he attacks."

Talk show host Stephen Colbert took aim at the new rape allegation, and the lack of publicity, during his show's opening monologue Monday night, calling the claims "specific," "credible" and "terrible."

The Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network, also known as RAINN, told Metro that since Carroll's account was published, the National Sexual Assault Hotline has seen a 53 percent increase in calls compared to the prior week.

The influx is not uncommon for the organization. Its president, Scott Berkowitz, said: "We generally do see a spike when some story about sexual assault is in the news, but this is higher than we normally see. The biggest we ever saw was the day after the Kavanaugh hearing (338 percent). It was not as big as that, but bigger than around the Cosby verdict (6 percent) and around the Access Hollywood tape (15 percent)."

Bill Cosby appeals 2018 conviction for sex attack

2 Bill Cosby's lawyers on Tuesday appealed his Pennsylvania conviction for drugging and sexually attacking former Temple University administrator Andrea Constand at his home near Philadelphia 15 years ago. Attorneys for the once-beloved American actor and comedian, star of "The Cosby Show," submitted a written appeal of the 2018 guilty verdict to the Pennsylvania Superior Court, calling for either a new trial or dismissal of the conviction altogether. The 348-page document said Cosby, 81, was wrongly convicted on the basis of "flawed, erroneous, and prejudicial rulings" by the trial judge, including allowing testimony from several accusers other than the woman he was charged with assaulting in the case. Cosby was convicted in April 2018 of attacking his onetime friend, Constand, a former women's basketball coach, in his suburban Philadelphia home. REUTERS

9/11 Victims' advocates confident of funding commitment

3 Advocates of a compensation fund for emergency personnel and others who responded at the sites of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks on the United States said on Tuesday that they had secured a commitment from Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell for prompt passage of legislation extending the program. John Feal, who heads a group lobbying Congress to authorize the fund through 2090, emerged from the meeting in McConnell's office telling reporters that the Republican senator had agreed to win Senate passage of a bill by August, when lawmakers typically leave Washington for a long summer recess. "We came in here praying for the best, prepared for the worst. We were ready to shake hands or we were ready to get into a street fight," Feal said. "Today was a good meeting," Feal added. McConnell aides would not confirm the timetable for passing a bill. REUTERS

Longtime Trump aide Grisham next press secretary

4 Stephanie Grisham, communications director for first lady Melania Trump and a longtime aide to President Donald Trump, will succeed Sarah Sanders as White House press secretary, Mrs. Trump announced on Tuesday. Melania Trump announced the development in a tweet to conclude the president's search for a press secretary after Sanders decided to resign and go back home to Arkansas earlier this month. Grisham, 42, a fixture in the Arizona Republican Party, was one of Trump's first hires for his presidential campaign — as a press aide in 2015. She served as a deputy press secretary when he took office in January 2017 and eventually moved over to the first lady's operation, and she has been fiercely loyal to the Trumps. Grisham was viewed internally as the candidate with the best rapport with Trump, a key requirement. REUTERS

Cyclists' frustration comes to a head at vigil for NYC crash victim

Things got heated at a public tribute for a bike courier hit and killed by a truck.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Apparently fed up with another tragic death, angry city cyclists recently unleashed a fury of frustration on a driver at a vigil for their friend and fellow rider.

Roughly a dozen protesters on bikes blocked streets and intersections during a vigil honoring 20-year-old Robyn Hightman, who was hit and killed by a truck at about 9:30 a.m. Monday at 6th Avenue and 23rd Street in Manhattan. The cyclists reportedly beat on cars, and tried to attack drivers with sticks.

Vigil for victim of crash.

No one was injured, but police were investigating the incident.

The outburst from cyclists speaks to the building tension of bike riders on NYC streets, who say they have had enough of what they consider to be hazardous cycling conditions and careless motorists and pedestrians.

"Robyn started working for the courier company today. First day in the job and they get run over by a truck driver. Enough is enough," Transportation Alternatives Senior Organizer Erwin Figueroa tweeted Monday night.

Memorial for victim.

"This year, we have already surpassed the total number of cyclist deaths that occurred in 2018. This is a crisis, plain and simple. And the consequences are severe if we fail to act with urgency. May Robyn Hightman rest in peace," tweeted NYC Comptroller Scott

Stringer.

Hightman is the 11th cyclist to be hit and killed in the city this year. She was reportedly attempting to cross into the bike lane when she was hit by a truck. Jermaine Torres, a witness, told CBS that "the helmet did not save her at all. She literally flew a little bit, like, two or three feet in the air, then landed really hard."

Hightman was sent to Bellevue hospital with head injuries and was pronounced dead upon arrival, CBS reported.

The driver, Antonio Garcia, left the scene, later claiming he was unaware he had hit a person. A witness flagged him down, and Garcia returned to the scene as police arrived. He was not arrested, but received equipment violations for issues with his truck.

"We grieve at any loss of life on our streets, and our thoughts are with the victim's family and friends," Seth Stein, a spokesman for Mayor Bill de Blasio, told ABC. "While cycling continues to explode in popularity, we will continue our work to make our bike lane network safer for everyone."

NTSB report details helicopter pilot's erratic flight before Midtown crash

Tim McCormack had initially asked to return to heliport.

A pilot who died when his helicopter crashed atop a New York City skyscraper on June 10 had been flying erratically and said he did not know where he was shortly before the accident, the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) said in a preliminary report released on Tuesday.

The report said the pilot, who has been identified as Tim McCormack, 58, of Clinton Corners, New York, had asked air traffic controllers for permission to return to a heliport on East 34th Street and then changed course and altitude several times. He came within 500 feet of the heliport before reversing course and striking the 54-story AXA Equitable Center on Seventh Avenue in one of the city's busiest areas a few blocks north of Times Square. No one in the building or on the ground was injured.

The NTSB said after taking off from the heliport McCormack had radioed that he did not know where he was.

Mayor Bill de Blasio said earlier this month to fly into tightly controlled airspace above midtown Manhattan the pilot would have needed approval from the air traffic control tower at LaGuardia Airport across the East River in the borough of Queens.

McCormack was a commercial pilot who had flown for American Continental Properties since 2014 the company said.

The weather on the day of the crash had been gray and rainy and the report said McCormack had waited in the heliport lounge for two hours continuously checking weather conditions on a tablet computer. Before he departed for the Linden, New Jersey, airport he told staff he saw "a 20-minute window to make it out," the NTSB report said.

The Agusta A109 helicopter had departed from Amenia in upstate New York earlier in the day with McCormack and one passenger and stopped for fuel in Poughkeepsie before landing in New York City. The passenger, who also was a pilot and was not aboard when the helicopter crashed, said the earlier flights had been uneventful.

The twin-engine, seven-seat helicopter was manufactured in 2000 and had been inspected last month. McCormack held a commercial pilot certificate with a helicopter rating issued in 2004 and was a certified flight instructor but he was not instrument rated. REUTERS

Cardi B pleads not guilty to charges in strip club fight

The rapper could face up to four years in prison for felony assault charges.

Grammy Award-winning rapper Cardi B pleaded not guilty on Tuesday to felony assault charges relating to an alleged fight at a New York City strip club last year.

The 26-year-old performer from the Bronx borough of New York City entered the plea in an appearance at New York Supreme Court in the borough of Queens.

"Not guilty, sir, honor," Cardi B, whose real name is Belcalis Almanzar, told the judge during the roughly 30-minute hearing.

As she entered the court building, wearing a navy-blue-and-pink pantsuit and carrying a pink handbag, one fan shouted "Free Cardi B."

The singer, known for chart-topping hits "Bodak Yellow" and "I Like It," waved back with a hand sporting long, pink fingernails, before being ushered into the court by her lawyer and two bodyguards.

The rapper surrendered to New York City police last October after a complaint claimed she was involved in a fight at the Angels NYC strip club in Queens.

"I ain't going to jail, I got a daughter," she declared near the end of her Los Angeles concert on Saturday.

Cardi B was indicted by a grand jury on felony charges earlier this month along with two other individuals in her entourage.

According to police, the rapper got into an argument in August with two of the club's female bartenders. She had accused one of them of having an affair with her husband Offset, a member of the rap trio Migos, according to local media.

"I ain't going to jail, I got a daughter."

Cardi B

"The victims allegedly had glass bottles hurled at them, alcoholic drinks thrown in their faces and one woman's head was slammed into the bar," Acting Queens District Attorney John Ryan said in a statement. "This kind of violence won't be tolerated in our community."

Cardi B left the Queens court on Tuesday by a side door, wearing a somber expression, briefly waving to fans before she got in a black SUV without speaking to press. Her lawyer, Jeff Kern, did not respond to a request for comment.

Her latest single, "Press," is currently at 60 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart. Cover art for the single, in which she says "Cardi don't need more press," shows her naked and being escorted out of a building as older, male photographers push toward her.

The next hearing in the case will be on Sept. 23 for co-defendants Tawana Jackson-Morel, 36, and Jeffrey Bush, 34, both of Brooklyn.

In an indictment made public Tuesday, Queens prosecutors claimed that Cardi B and Jackson-Morel used social media to coordinate an Aug. 15 attack on a 21-year-old bartender and discussed money payments to people who carried it out.

Several unapprehended females also assaulted the bartender, while Bush filmed the attack, according to the prosecutors.

Cardi B and Jackson-Morel took part in another attack on Aug. 29 targeting the bartender's 23-year-old sister, also a bartender at the club, the prosecutors said.

If convicted, the three defendants face up to four years in prison.

MTA board, Cuomo back repeat-criminal ban from NYC transit system

The state will vote Wednesday on banning repeat transit criminals from using New York's subways and buses.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

The MTA board is mulling a ban on repeat criminal offenders riding New York City subways and buses.

On Monday, NYC's transit board members voted in favor of banning transit criminals, including sex offenders, thieves and other felons, from using the transit system, at least for a pocket of time. Gov. Andrew Cuomo also voiced his support for the resolution. The state is expected to vote on the resolution during a meeting on Wednesday.

"I am fully supportive of the resolution, passed [Monday] by the MTA's transit and bus committee, to take action against serial offenders, including banning them from the system," Cuomo told SiLive.com. "This is a commonsense issue, and the New York State Legislature and criminal justice system have a responsibility to work with the MTA to ensure these perpetrators who repeatedly target victims on our subsystem for a felony or sex crime.

"These are people who've made a career out of victimizing our ridership," Chief of Transit Edward Delatorre told the Wall Street Journal on Monday.

The MTA's Transit Recidivism Report showed 67 transit recidivist arrests in the first quarter of 2019, which mirror statistics from 2018. These numbers included 44 felony arrests for robbery, grand larceny, assault or stalking, as well as 23 sex-offense arrests.

While the resolution has support from many powerful voices, the measure does not have any clear-cut language as to what the parameters of the ban would include, or how enforcement would go into action. This leads to questions about potential privacy issues, civil rights violations, and the overall question of how many police officers would be needed to enforce a presently nebulous law.

"This proposal will disproportionately impact black and brown men who have been profiled by police, and it will further marginalize them for life from access to jobs, government services, educational opportunities and treatment programs," Legal Aid Society Attorney Tina Luongo told the Wall Street Journal.

"I am fully supportive of the resolution, passed [Monday] by the MTA's transit and bus committee, to take action against serial offenders, including banning them from the system."

Trump threatens 'obliteration,' Iran calls White House 'mentally retarded'

The president last week called off an airstrike at the last minute.

President Donald Trump threatened on Tuesday to obliterate parts of Iran if it attacked "anything American," in a new war of words with Iran, which condemned the latest U.S. sanctions on Tehran and called White House actions "mentally retarded."

Trump on Monday signed an executive order imposing largely symbolic economic sanctions against Iranian Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei and other senior figures, with punitive measures against Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif expected later this week.

Iran shot down a U.S. drone last week and Trump said he had called off a retaliatory airstrike with minutes to spare, saying too many people would have been killed. It would have been the first time the United States had bombed the Islamic Republic in four decades of mutual hostility.

Iran's Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei.

In rhetoric similar to the kind of harsh words he used to aim at North Korea, Trump tweeted: "Any attack by Iran on anything American will be met with great and overwhelming force. In some areas, overwhelming will mean obliteration."

In a televised address on Tuesday, Iranian President Hassan Rouhani said the new sanctions against Khamenei would have no practical impact because the top cleric had no assets abroad.

Rouhani, a pragmatist who won two elections on promises to open Iran up to the world, said the White House's actions were "mentally retarded" — an insult that other Iranian officials have used in the past about Trump, but a departure from Rouhani's own comparatively measured tone over the years.

"Tehran's strategic patience does not mean we have fear," said Rouhani, who with his cabinet runs Iran's day-to-day affairs while Khamenei, in power since 1989, is the country's ultimate authority.

ESCALATING

U.S. SANCTIONS

The United States has imposed crippling financial sanctions against Iran since last year when Trump withdrew from a 2015 deal between Tehran and world powers under which Iran curbed its nuclear program.

Tension has escalated sharply since last month, when the Trump administration tightened its sanctions noose, ordering all countries to halt purchases of Iranian oil.

That has effectively starved the Iranian economy of the main source of revenue Tehran uses to import food for its 81 million people, and left the pragmatic wing of Iran's leadership, led by Rouhani, with no benefits to show for its nuclear agreement.

Trump says the accord reached under his predecessor Barack Obama was a failure because its terms were not permanent and did not cover security issues beyond the nuclear program, such as missiles and role in various Middle East conflicts. REUTERS

Border agency head quits amid outcry detentions outcry

The acting commissioner of the U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) agency, John Sanders, is resigning and will leave his post on July 5, the agency said on Tuesday, a move that coincides with an outcry over the treatment of detained migrant children.

The relocation of 250 migrant children from an overcrowded Texas border-patrol station, where they were held for weeks in squalid conditions without adequate food and water, has stepped up criticism from immigration activists and Democrats of Republican President Donald Trump's hardline immigration policies.

The New York Times first reported that Sanders was resigning. Sanders has led the agency since April, when Trump reshuffled the management of U.S. immigration agencies under the Department of Homeland Security.

Dealing with a surge of migrants at the U.S.-Mexico border has been a priority for Trump but the president has proven unable to push most of his goals through Congress.

On Tuesday, U.S. House Democrats said they plan to approve $4.5 billion in emergency funding to address the crisis caused by the migrant surge, but the measure has drawn a veto threat from Trump.

Aries Not everything will go according to plan, but as long as you are adaptable and roll with the punches, you will come out on top. A physical change will boost your confidence.

Taurus Bring your ideas out into the open and promote what you want to happen. A lifestyle change will lead to a healthy and happy future. Minimize stress and enjoy life.

Gemini Take the initiative and make arrangements to socialize with friends. Expressing your feelings will lead to a response that may not be expected, but will be valuable.

Cancer Whatever you do, give it your own unique touch. Trust in your vision and insight, and show confidence when discussing your plans. A partnership needs a tune-up.

Leo Look for alternative sources of information if you are confused. Ask questions and consider if someone is trying to mislead or take advantage of you. Put your energy into personal growth, not into pleasing others.

Virgo Preparation will help you fulfill the promises you have made. If you keep the momentum flowing, success will be yours. Your confident attitude will persuade others.

Libra Don't avoid the inevitable. The sooner you deal with problems or people who are causing you grief, the easier it will be to get on with your life.

Scorpio Do more research before you make a promise or commit to a project. Money can be made if everything has been set up correctly. Don't leave anything to chance.

Sagittarius You will leave an impression on someone. What you do or say will be honored or scorned, depending on how accurate you are and how willing you are to stand behind your words.

Capricorn Take care of personal matters and make overdue changes. Refuse to let your emotions sway your opinion or lead you in a direction that you know isn't right for you.

Aquarius Don't let anything or anyone slow you down or stand in your way. You have remarkable ideas that, once implemented, will make your life better. Love is in the air.

Pisces Consider the way you would like to live and start making changes that will satisfy your needs. Someone you have helped in the past will return the favor. EUGENIA LAST

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

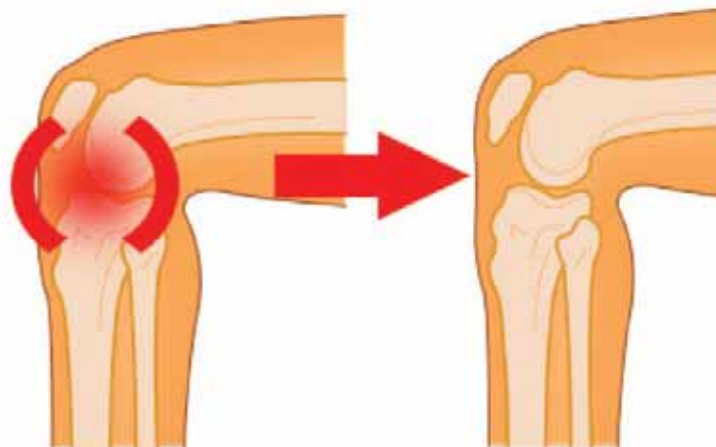

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

LIFESTYLE

Changes in work, family and relational dynamics make this generation see sex in another light.

LUZ LANCHEROS,
letters@metro.us

A study that went viral in April, coordinated by the University of San Diego and published by the scientific journal Archives of Sexual Behavior, showed that millennials (born in the '80s and '90s) had fewer relationships than their generational predecessors.

With the responses of 26,700 Americans, the study concluded that 15 percent of young adults between 20 and 24 had not had any sexual partners since they'd turned 18 (Generation X had a 6 percent in the same age range). Other countries such as Sweden, Japan, the Netherlands and England have analyzed the same phenomenon, with studies published in recent years reaching the same conclusion.

|ISTOCK

And while there are social and cultural peculiarities in each country studied — for example, Japan is an ultra-competitive society where there is, so far, a change due to the pressure of having a family and also a culture where extra work is praised, among other factors — the way in which courtship rites are formed and what was once a priority has changed in a large part of society.

Vice asked several millennials why they no longer had sex. Many spoke of the superficiality on social networks and getting fed up having to do “small talk” on apps. Others were focused on their careers.

On the other hand, do you really need someone else when there are so many options? And that includes everything from pornography (and the change in how men and women view sex and all its content since #MeToo, and even from before) to the use of devices for pleasure (a study done

10 years ago in the U.S. showed that the use of vibrators was growing in popularity). Clearly, there is the fact that our now-digital lives have changed the meaning of relationships and how we connect.

“Now it’s all about connecting with people in a more virtual sense,” Matt Britton, millennial expert, explained to Metro. “Likewise, people are delaying their relationships for a later stage because there is more focus on entrepreneurship or career than finding a partner.”

Britton stated that previous generations behaved differently, clearly, due to social changes that had not yet occurred, such as the legalization of marijuana in some countries or the emergence of the internet.

“There are a lot of factors that have impacted younger generations. Those before did not have the tools we have for doing business, for example. The baby boomers

- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful “cramp” in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren’t straight—they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it’s worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and scaly—sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

“There is data that shows that technology is actually bringing people closer together. Saying that technology is making this audience immune to personal relationships, I think it is a myth.”

Matt Britton, expert on millennials and Generation X grew up in a different era and their vision of the world therefore was different. The tools have changed and therefore their behaviors,” he said.

There are more factors. Many millennials no longer have their own place, like their parents did at their age. In fact, several live with their parents due to an unstable labor market (more than 1 in 5 adults, or 22 percent of U.S. millennials, according to a Zillow study this year). And there is also the complexity of relationships on apps, in terms of what it means to talk to people, have consensual relationships and a behavioral change that many do not assimilate, especially men, as shown by the popular site Bye Felipe.

In fact, a popular 2015 Vanity Fair article (“Tinder and the Dawn of the Dating Apocalypse”) was already talking about the liquidity of these relationships, which clearly do not apply to an entire generation or in all contexts. And this also does not apply in the case of sexual education and pregnancies: Although there is more prevention than before and a decrease in teenage pregnancies in some countries, in other contexts such as Latin America, sex education is a controversial issue for many societies and governments and pregnancies are on the rise in several countries, with other factors that affect millennials in these latitudes.

That is why the issue is complex and to blame technology in a moralistic and condemnatory way for these new dynamics would be a mistake — at least for Matt Britton, who does not believe that millennials do not know how to interact beyond social networks.

“When you go to a festival, you are interacting with other people. So, there is one data point that shows that technology is actually bringing people closer together. Technology has induced a variety of other meetups and the ability for people to aggregate and galvanize over social issues. So, I don’t think that this use of technology is making this audience immune to personal relationships. I think it is a myth. And a trend cannot speak for a generation as a whole,” he commented.

There is still a long way to being conclusive about the relational dynamics of the generations after Gen X. But there is something that is sure: Everything has changed in terms of desire, consent and the way in which people and their priorities are connected.

It all starts with the truth

The Kunhardts directed HBO's new jaw-dropping documentary, "True Justice: Bryan Stevenson's Fight for Equality."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Emmy Award-winning documentary filmmakers Peter, George and Teddy Kunhardt are known for taking sensitive subject matter to the next level by bringing the truth to light. The truth is a tricky subject often hard to hear, but the Kunhardts are warriors of informing and educating the world on earnest messages that need to be heard. That rings eerily true with their latest documentary, "True Justice: Bryan Stevenson's Fight for Equality" (premiering June 26). The new HBO film highlights Stevenson's endless fight to advocate for the poor, the incarcerated and the condemned through an unjust and morally corrupt justice system. The Kunhardts sat down with Metro to discuss their latest film, delve into why Stevenson's story is so compelling, and highlight why we all must learn the truth about our country's history before it repeats itself.

When did you first hear about Bryan Stevenson and what motivated you to make this documentary centered around his work?

George (GK): The three of us watched Bryan's TED talk back in 2012, and once we watched that and saw his charisma and his energy and his message, we knew that he would be an amazing person to do a film on and spend a couple of years working with. It took a long time to get him to approve the project and to get him to come with us. In 2016, our brother, who is the executive director of the Gordon Parks Foundation, honored Bryan with a prestigious award there, and that's where we got to meet him for the first time. From then on, we just kept asking him to do a project, and he saw our "King in the Wilderness" film and loved it, so everything just fell into place.

Teddy (TK): I would add that when we heard him speak for the first time in real life — there's a true magic to him and we all simultaneously turned to each other and we just said we need to get this guy to tell his story. We've become very careful about whom we do a film on. We know we have to live with these subjects for a year and a half. So we're very careful that we are picking someone we respect and admire and who can fall under the banner of moral leadership.

While working on the film and knowing the unjust nature of our justice system, was there anything that truly shocked you?

TK: You know, we were very privileged to have had an amazing education growing up. But never during the course of my history classes did I learn about convict leasing. Bryan's narrative of the North won the Civil War but the South won the narrative — meaning slavery didn't end, it just evolved.

Peter (PK): Bryan is well known for his work with getting people off death row who are wrongly convicted or badly convicted. That's a good portion of the film, but the other portion of the film is his insight into the country's history and how slavery didn't just end, it evolved and transformed into other forms. It exists today in the racial undertones.

What steps do you think need to be taken to help change the system?

PK: I think education is the first step. Messages like Bryan Stevenson's message and truth-telling about what really is going on in this country just haven't taken place yet. Truth-telling is something the next generations have got to not only hear about, but grow up believing. It all begins with the truth. This is all just the very beginning.

TK: And being willing to go and listen to the truth.

What do you hope audiences will take away from "True Justice: Bryan Stevenson's Fight for Equality"?

GK: I hope people watch the film, have conversations with their friends and family, and hopefully make the trek down to Alabama to see the museum and the lynching memorial because there is a whole different life about it when you're physically there.

TK: This is just getting the conversation started. We have to keep the conversation alive and teach the next generation this brutal history so it doesn't repeat itself and so we can start to repair the damage that was done.

GADGETS AND APPS TO LEARN PLAYING MUSIC

DANIEL CASILLAS | METRO WORLD NEWS
PHOTOS: CONTRIBUTED

Learning to play a musical instrument takes years of practice, but with the help of technology you can achieve it much faster. Metro shows the latest gizmos for those looking to make first steps on their own.

SMART PIANO

This gadget combines a classic instrument and the advantages of tablets and smartphones. Smart Piano connects to smart devices and can read sheet music and MP3 files.

MI GUITAR

A simplified guitar or a more advanced version of "Guitar Hero." It is able to connect to your computer or mobile devices via Bluetooth to guide you on how to play your favorite songs.

ARTIPHON

This gadget can imitate guitar, piano, violin and several other instruments. Artiphon is the first MIDI controller that lets you strum, slide, tap and drum any sound on a single interface.

ILLUMINATING PIANO

It can be a great tool for learning to play piano! This instrument has 61 keys, MIDI support, and is capable of connecting to Mac or Windows computers via USB in order to provide access to software that guides users.

AERODRUMS

This instrument is a state-of-the-art option for drummers. Aerodrums is made up of wireless pedals that connect to your computer and create exactly the right sounds based on your movements, even though you are performing them in the air.

Q&A

JACOB HALL GORDON,
co-founder at Artiphon

What is Artiphon?

The Artiphon INSTRUMENT 1 is the first digital instrument that lets you slide, strum, tap and drum on a single interface.

How does Artiphon help users learn to play music?

It is a highly flexible musical exploration tool. Choose your techniques, sounds, tunings, and effects to design your own instrument, as simple or complex as you wish. Turn on Smart Strum and each fret becomes a full chord you can play with a single finger. Turn on the built-in arpeggiator and the INSTRUMENT 1 will play the notes for you in the patterns you choose.

How does Artiphon interact with smart devices?

It connects to your iPhone, iPad, Mac, or PC. You can also use the Artiphon iOS app with its built-in sounds, or connect to your favourite music program like GarageBand, Ableton Live, and Logic (any program that accepts MIDI).

The craziness of NBA free agency is just four days away.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

The glorious chaos of NBA free agency is just four days away and this year there is more mystery than ever for where some of the biggest stars in pro basketball will wind up.

Here we will handi-cap the teams with the most intriguing situations, predicting where the likes of Kevin Durant, Kyrie Irving, Jimmy Butler, Kemba Walker and many other big names will land.

Knicks

The two franchises that were hurt most by the Kevin Durant injury in the Finals were obviously the Warriors and Knicks. Golden State, because it lost arguably the best player in the world in a do-or-die Game 5. New York, because the gruesome injury severely clouded the likelihood of Durant heading to Manhattan.

Durant-to-the-Knicks was being spoken of as a "done deal" by most of the top NBA media types, but now that Durant will likely miss the entire 2019-20 season, there is not much of a sense of urgency for him to change locales.

There has been growing speculation in recent days that Durant could sign a five-year max contract with the Warriors, with an agreement that Golden State would then turn around and trade him to the Knicks. That way, Durant maximizes the amount of money he can make, and the Warriors get something in return.

The Knicks front office likely isn't too keen on that idea considering that they'd have to part with key assets, but would ultimately do it if that's what Durant wants (no doubt, this is a players' league now).

One way or another, I gotta believe that Durant lands in New York this summer. He knows full well that the one thing that could separate him from the pack of all-time NBA greats is bringing a title to the long-suffering Knicks. It would make him an immortal not just in New York, but also put him right up there with Jordan and LeBron James in the discussion of greatest of all time.

As for the second (and potentially third) star to place next to Durant in New York, Knicks fans will likely have to wait. And that might not be the worst thing.

Durant can be in the fold of decision-making for a full year and next summer the Knicks can cash in all of their assets and money in the trade and free-agent markets.

Some of the current top free agents could again be available too (Kyrie?), as signing one-year deals has become en vogue in the NBA.

Projection: Knicks sign Kevin Durant.

Nets

The Nets must essentially choose between Kyrie Irving and D'Angelo Russell and it looks as though they'll go the Kyrie route as long as they're assured that someone else is coming with him.

Kyrie and fellow free agent Jimmy Butler have expressed mutual interest in playing with one another many times over the years and the Nets now have the cap room to sign both of them outright.

We could see a scenario here where Kyrie signs a one-year deal with the Nets, to leave his options open for next summer (a jump to the Knicks to join Durant?). Kyrie recently signed with Roc Nation, which orchestrated all of those year-to-year deals Durant had with Golden State.

Kyrie Irving and Kevin Durant are still both likely to land in New York, either with the Nets or Knicks.

GETTY IMAGES

Meanwhile, expect Russell to land with the Suns or possibly even return to the Lakers in restricted free agency.

Projection: Nets sign Kyrie Irving and Jimmy Butler.

Sixers

Keeping Butler, Tobias Harris and JJ Redick would mean the Sixers will exceed the salary cap and would put them in something of a financial hell in trying to round out a full roster. All signs point to Butler seriously testing the waters of free agency, and we project him going to the Nets with Kyrie Irving here.

It's much more likely that the Sixers retain Harris and Redick and see if that team (with Joel Embiid and Ben Simmons now entering their prime) can take an Eastern Conference that might not even have Kawhi Leonard as a resident anymore.

Quick hits

Projections on where other top NBA free agents will land this summer:

Kawhi Leonard: Clippers
Klay Thompson: Warriors
Khris Middleton: Bucks
Nikola Vucevic: Magic
DeMarcus Cousins: Warriors
Al Horford: Clippers

Projection: Sixers re-sign Tobias Harris, JJ Redick.

Celtics

The New York Times' Marc Stein reported Tuesday that the Celtics are "a stealth suitor" for Kemba Walker to essentially replace Kyrie Irving in free agency.

This would be an absolute coup for Danny Ainge.

The issue here is that Walker is one loyal cat, and has already stated that he would be willing to take less money to stay in Charlotte to help build a winner there.

Not many people would have the cojones to tell [Hornets owner] Michael Jordan that they're turning their back on him. I mean, who wants to let Michael F'n Jordan down?!

So Ainge would have to do one hell of a pitch job.

It's much more likely that the Celtics look to sign a couple of middle-tier free agents with their newfound money. There have been rumblings that the Celtics are looking at going after Bucks restricted free agent Malcolm Brogdon (which would both injure the rival Bucks and help Boston), and they could also target a player like Kevon Looney or Julius Randle.

Another wild card here is free agent DeMarcus Cousins. Cousins' value is way down after an injury-plagued season with the Warriors.

Cousins was reportedly ready to sign with the Celtics in free agency last offseason before the Warriors came charging in, and Boogie could do two things by heading to Boston this offseason. He could potentially get more money with the Celtics than he would elsewhere (Ainge may be willing to overspend) to recover some of the money lost last year, and he would again be in the mix for a championship.

Keep in mind that Cousins and former Celtics star Isaiah Thomas are close, having played in Sacramento together. A reunion between Boston and "I.T." could come to fruition this summer as well.

Projection: Celtics sign Malcolm Brogdon, Kevon Looney.

MICKEY CATCHING UP IN METS BLAME GAME

Everything just sort of seems wrong with this picture.

I'm not going to deny that I've defended New York Mets manager Mickey Callaway during another stretch of embarrassing baseball.

In fact, I've deflected much of the blame onto team ownership, the Wilpon family and general manager Brodie Van Wagenen for not surrounding the manager with competent talent.

The Mets' biggest Achilles' heel has been its bullpen, which is the definition of an overwhelming liability as they are one of the worst units in Major League Baseball.

Yes, there is plenty of blame that is to be placed on the Wilpons and Van Wagenen for not allotting the proper funds to ensure a proper depth chart of relievers.

Edwin Diaz has been a shell of his former self at times while Jeurys Familia looked like a minor leaguer at best before injury issues sidelined him. Robert Gsellman has also been plagued by inconsistencies.

The one lone decent arm in Seth Lugo has been overworked and flanked by a carousel of problematic pitchers that, like Familia, might not belong in the majors.

The fact of the matter is that Callaway's decision-making skills haven't helped the lack of bullpen talent. Rather than have his starting pitchers push the modern-day pitch limits — which is no more than 100 — the Mets manager has been too quick in calling in his downright putrid 'pen.

He's constantly been burned in the process as his bullpen owns the 28th-ranked ERA in the majors with a 5.23 mark with a league-worst 17 blown saves in the process.

Despite his pitching background with the Cleveland Indians — which was a main factor as to why he landed the Mets' managerial job in the first place — Callaway continues to show that he is incapable of properly managing a majority of his pitchers.

At least, that's what some reports are indicating.

According to a report from Mike Puma of the New York Post, Van Wagenen relayed messages to Callaway off-site during a June 1 game against the Arizona Diamondbacks to pull ace Jacob deGrom.

It turned out that deGrom suffered a hip cramp during the game on a night in which the bullpen blew another lead in a 6-5 loss. But the ace was not happy about being pulled.

"I wasn't happy I was coming out, no matter who was taking me out," he said.

While it was most likely a decision made by Van Wagenen to protect New York's best pitcher after signing a $137.5 million deal, Callaway's failure to notice that or even need the assistance of the general manager during a game further shows that he isn't fit to manage the Mets.

"Hell yeah, its unusual. Sending word to the dug-out, telling the manager what to do?" a source told Puma. "I have never heard of that before."

Are we surprised that the Mets are setting new lows of incompetence? Not really.

And it's still only June.
